Historical Note

The Pilgrim People were an influential Milwaukee Choir group from 1968 until the late 1990s, known for introducing more contemporary pop and rock influences to their liturgical music. Over their lifespan, the group boasted a total of 250 musicians and singers, a children's choir and a troop of liturgical dancers, and released four albums of music on independent record labels. The group was also known for their charity work, asking for charity donations of food instead of appearance fees, raising over 130 tons of food for needy people and families. The choir disbanded in the late 1990s, feeling that their mission of introducing popular music influences to liturgical music had been accomplished.
